What's New In?

The International Consortium of Investigative Journalists broke its own record by obtaining 1.2 million documents from Brazilian private investigators that relate to the unsolved murder of American journalist Daniel Pearl. Last year, the group of 33 journalists and researchers from eight countries leaked 1.3 million emails, text messages and other correspondence from the investigators involved in the contract killings of Pearl and four others. This year, the group obtained a total of 1.2 million documents from investigators involved in the case of journalist Daniel Pearl's death in 2002. A total of 20,000 are relevant to Pearl's killing. One document contains a coded message that promises money in exchange for information about Pearl's death, said the FBI.

INTERNATIONAL COLLABORATION APPLAUDS FIRST BULLETIN ON MISSING IN COLOMBIA The documents, which are not related to the 2010 murder of Jamal Khashoggi, shed light on how the investigators charged with killing Pearl and a fellow journalist in what became an international story about international freedom of the press have been treated by Brazilian investigators. One of the documents, dated July 13, 2002, and written by a lawyer who worked for one of the investigators, shows that one of the investigators tried to put pressure on the Brazilian attorney general. In it, the lawyer wrote that "there will be no solution" to the case without the payment of R$2.2 million. The Brazilian group then decided to release all the investigators' correspondence by issuing a "bulletin," it said in a press release Monday. Pearl, who was a reporter for the Wall Street Journal, was kidnapped and murdered in Karachi in 2002. The case remains unsolved and the Pakistani authorities have long stopped investigating it.

INTERNATIONAL CONSPIRACY THEORISTS APPEAL TO US TO INVESTIGATE MISSING US WOMAN IN MEXICO In Pearl's case, the international investigation suggests that the journalist's widow, Judea Pearl, was tricked into believing that her husband had left the country to work as a "fixer" for The Wall Street Journal. Judea Pearl "then traveled to a small, sparsely populated town in the deserts of southern Pakistan to meet a supposed friend who turned out to be an Iranian-Israeli black-market arms dealer," according to the press release. ◆
